

Some Hardly any of my best friends are black

Assuming the average white and average black American each have 100 friends, this is what the racial breakdown of their friend networks would look like.

WASHINGTONPOST.COM/WONKBLOG

Source: Public Religion Research Institute

The implication of these findings is that when we talk about race in our personal lives, we are by and large discussing it with people who look like us.

Take the Race Literacy Quiz. Talk to your group about the results.